My grandmother and grandfather kept a Model 25 pump action Daisy to ward off squirrels that would re-appropriate the blessings of the garden to their own nefarious means. Year after year, we reaped the benefits of a bountiful garden, due largely to the accuracy of the Model 25. My grandmother also made it a point to teach me marksmanship with that rifle, and I consider it to be my first gun. Today, that same 25 has its place in my gun safe, next to all the guns that came after. I still love picking it up, from time to time, for a bit of plinking.
